LENGTH: Approx. 70,000 words

GENRE: Thriller

CONCEPT: What if a real government project had the ability to control the weather? And what if someone commandeered that project to destroy the United States?

Montana Sinclair poured her heart into creating a project for measuring the magnetism circling the Earth. Now she discovers that someone is using her project to physically destroy the United States. Montana battles her inner demons, assassins, and catastrophic weather in a bid to save the planet before it is irreparably damaged

MARKET ANALYSIS: Touched lends interesting credibility to a real government project (HAARP). It supports the old adage, "The weather's never been right since we went to the moon in the 60's." Touched also gives plausible scenarios for weather and geological anomalies like the Indian Ocean tsunami and recent volcanic eruptions. There are two other books in this particular character's series, EBOMB and Nanotech Virus.

SIMILAR BOOKS: The Raptor Virus (2001, Broadman & Holman) Like Touched by Fire, it's a plan to destroy the USA from outside the country, but falls short on high powered action, subplots, and a redemptive quality.

Comes a Horseman (2005 Westbow) This story revolves around speculative biblical circumstances. Touched by Fire builds around real-life weather and geological possibilities. For example, the US Geological Survey's concern of a volcanic flank failure in the Canary Islands causing a tsunami on the US East Coast, and the real-life conspiracy theories about the US government HAARP program both become reality in Touched by Fire.
